Scheduled personal articles endorsement (Floaters policies)

Boats, yachts and other watercraft endorsement

Most home insurance policies provide a limited coverage for direct damage to vessels, its fittings, equipment and property. Legal liability is automatically covered but very narrowly. You must know that your basic home insurance policy is not very well designed to cover all categories of vessels.

Each insurance company sets its standards of acceptance. Typically, insurance policies limit the compensation to be paid for the value of a vessel to a specific amount ranging from $ 500 to $ 5 000 according to the form chosen.

Regarding Legal liability coverage, insurers generally cover you as the owner of any vessel:

- Equipped with one or several outboard motors, whose power individual or combined more than 18 kw (24HP).
- Equipped with one or more engines, integrated or semi-outboard, whose individual power or combined does not exceed 38 kw (50 hp).
- That has an overall length of no more than 8 meters (26 feet).
- Not equipped with an engine like rowing boats, canoes, Rubber boat, pedal boats and sailboats.

Vessels may not be covered everywhere in the world, the navigation area accepted may also vary from one insurer to another. The risks are different depending on the navigation area where the boat is used. You must know the navigation area limit specified in your home insurance policy.

Depending on the type of watercraft you possess, its value or length you may need more extensive coverages. Some specialized insurers are able to offer comprehensive insurance policy covering the hull and legal liability. If you wish to know more about specialized watercraft insurance please consult our “Recreational boat insurance” section.
